

About Bala Kanayson

Bala Kanayson, the founder of Whole Mind Success®, spent 20-years in the engineering field working for international corporations including Rolls Royce, GE Aircraft Engines, and Schlumberger. He is a Chartered Engineer in aerospace science and a Fellow of the American Institute of Stress.

It was during his years as an engineer that Mr. Kanayson began developing Whole Mind Success® – a powerful new approach to achieving greater productivity not only on the job but also in every other area of life. He combined the structured principles of math, engineering, and science which he used in the aerospace, oil, and electronics industries, with his research into the neurological science of the cognitive brain. This resulted in the creation of a revolutionary new way to master careers, finances, relationships, and goals.

His work evolved into Whole Mind Success® – a series of sharply honed, practical and effective seminars that are both educational and entertaining. He has presented his seminars to hundreds of executives, educators, and students at corporations, organizations, and universities throughout the world including Europe, Singapore, Canada, and the United States.

Mr. Kanayson has also been a guest speaker at the United Nations.

In addition to his busy schedule as a respected and much requested seminar presenter, Mr. Kanayson also teaches stress reduction, education and career building skills.
